Did you know?

In addition to Family Dispute Resolution (FDR), Fair Way also offers separate Relationship Property Resolution services.

One on one meeting

Meet with the mediator individually. You can do this by phone, online or in person.

Preparation for mediation

Optional – A professional can help you prepare for mediation.

Mediation

Meet and make a plan for your family. There are ways to include children in the process, including engaging with a Voice of Child Specialist.

Agreement

You can keep your agreement private, or you can apply to have your agreement made into a Court Order.

OR

No agreement

You can make an application to the Family Court.

Visit our website at www.fairwayresolution.com/fdr to watch a video on the FDR process.

About mediation

FDR is a confidential mediation service designed to help parents and caregivers make their own decisions for their children's future.

The focus is on building better co-parenting relationships and communication with the assistance of a FDR mediator.

FDR is available to anyone who has a significant role in a child's life.

Our team will guide you through the process. We will speak with you, give you information, and help assess whether your situation is suitable for FDR.

Who pays for the FDR service?

Everyone is eligible for a subsidised service and FDR mediation is free if you qualify for government funding.

To find out whether you qualify for funding call us on 0800 77 44 20 and talk to our team.

If you do not qualify for funding, our team will talk through payment options with you.

There are 12 hours of FDR services available for each family in a 12 month period.

Legal advice

Initial advice and assistance from the Family Legal Advice Service is free if you qualify for government funding.

Parenting through separation

You are encouraged to attend a Parenting Through Separation (PTS) programme before coming to mediation. This is a free service for all families.
